Statement C – FOI procedures

Which documents are available under freedom of information?

The legislation governing freedom of information in Victoria is the Freedom of Information Act 1982 (Vic) (the 'Act').

The Act sets out which documents are available, how applications are processed, and what privacy and other restrictions apply before documents can be released.

In essence, the general principle of freedom of information is that all documents in our possession should be available to the public, subject to certain limitations. Freedom of information does not give applicants unlimited access to documents.

There are several important restrictions on the types of documents available under freedom of information. For example, documents which may not be available include:

- 'exempt documents' such as internal working documents, law enforcement documents, documents relating to legal proceedings, or documents affecting the personal privacy of other people.
- documents which are already publicly available or available by paying a fee under another Act.
- documents which were created before 1 January 1989.

Unless required by law, letters of complaint are not released where they would reveal the personal details of the complainant. For example, a letter from a resident complaining about a neighbour's dog would not usually be released.

How long will my freedom of information request take?

The Act provides that if we don't notify you of our decision within 30 days of your application, you have the right to appeal to the Victorian Information Commissioner. We endeavour to process your application by this deadline, but cannot guarantee a specific response time.

In some instances, older files may be required to be retrieved off-site from archives. Documents cannot be released until we have assessed them in accordance with the Act.

To avoid disappointment, you should plan ahead and lodge your application as soon as possible.

What documents should I ask for in my freedom of information request?

When requesting documents, make your application as specific or detailed as possible. If you seek a particular document, tell us. This will help us search for the document and respond promptly to your request.

For example, if you seek a photocopy of a specific report, try to tell us the date of the report, the title or subject of the report, the specific address or street the report relates to, or the time period it relates to.

If your request is too broad or not detailed enough to allow us to find the document you are looking for, it may be delayed or even refused.

How much does it cost to apply for a freedom of information request?

The freedom of information application fee is two fee units. We will not start processing your application until you pay the application fee. In some instances there may be additional processing fees (such as search, supervision or photocopying costs) but we will tell you about these costs, if relevant.

How to make a freedom of information application

Apply online

To apply online, you will need to:

- complete the online application
- make payment at the time of application by Mastercard or Visa card

Apply by mail

To apply by mail, you will need to:

- download and complete a Freedom of Information application form
- send your application form, together with a cheque or money order payable to "Yarra City Council" covering the application fee to:

The Freedom of Information Officer
Yarra City Council
PO Box 168
RICHMOND VIC 3121

Apply in person

To apply in person, you will need to:

- download and complete a Freedom of Information application form
- bring your completed form to one of Council's Customer Service Centres and make a payment in person. Payment by cash, Mastercard, Visa card, cheque or money orders are all accepted.

Apply by email

We do not recommend the lodgement of an application by email, as we cannot accept payments that way so you will still need to make a payment using one of the avenues listed above. We also find that applications submitted on a completed form are faster to process as we usually have all the information we need and don't need to seek further clarification.

If you still wish to apply by email, you will need to:

- send details of the documents requested in an email with "Freedom of Information" in the subject line to info@yarracity.vic.gov.au
- separately make a payment of the application fee via one of the mechanisms listed above (online credit card payment, cheque by mail or payment in person)

Enquiries

Applicants can make enquiries about Freedom of Information matters by calling Council on 9205 5555, or by emailing info@yarracity.vic.gov.au.
